

EDUCATORS GATHERED FOR DEDICATION TO-DAY

State's New Temple of Learning Inspected by Distinguished Visitors.

OFFICIALS GREET GUESTS

President Butler Calls Modern University the Well Spring of Freedom.

ALBANY, Oct. 16.—Among a great number of the country's educators assembled here to dedicate the first State Education building in the United States today was a continuance of public meetings and speeches to-day and a beginning to-night of the more social and ceremonial observances, to reach a conclusion to-morrow.

To-day's programme brought forward as speakers Dr. Charles Richard Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin on extension teaching, Dr. William Starr Myers of Princeton on private schools, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia on the modern university, Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation, New York, on "Preparation for the Profession," and Canon H. Hensley Henson of Westminster Abbey, London, on "The Value of Historical Studies to the Higher Learning."

In his address President Butler said: "The process to aid and guide for the school, the college and the university are founded on the belief that in some fashion if schools and colleges and universities had never been heard of, a true university is a proving ground for personality and for intellectual power and a splendid gymnasium for the exercise of the muscles of the intellect and of the will. The primary purpose of universities is to provide the companionship of scholars at a time when sufficient maturity has been reached to make the joy of the intellectual life intense and productive. If I may have a charming place from a colleague of mine I should say that a university is a company of scholars in which those who have discovered the mind make full and profitable use of their discovery."

The university is the home of that freedom of the spirit which is liberty. Liberty to think, liberty to speak, liberty to teach, always observing those limitations which common sense, right feeling and a decent respect for the opinions of mankind put upon all of us.

Modern faith in liberty has weakened a good deal in these latter years, and on every side and in almost every land it is now proposed to supplant liberty by the medieval instrument of regulation. It appears to be likely that we must undergo an experience of this reactionary procedure, until once more its utility is made plain to every one. Then, doubtless by common consent, the search for liberty and its right exercise will be resumed.

The task of the university grows greater as the difficulties of democracy grow heavier and more numerous. The university must not follow, it must lead; it must remain true to principle; the university must not sacrifice its independence either through fear of criticism or through hope of favors and gain.

We must not overlook the fact that all existing institutions of civilization, which have had their origin in the Western world, the university is the oldest, save only the Christian Church and the Roman Catholic Church.

At the Executive Mansion this afternoon Mrs. Dix held a reception for the visiting delegates and their wives.

The Governor, the Regents of the University and other State officials and their wives gave a reception this evening in the rotunda of the new State hall to the 200 representatives of institutions here and abroad who have been invited to the dedication.

On the receiving line were Gov. and Mrs. Dix, Chancellor and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Canon and Mrs. H. Hensley Henson, Vice-Chancellor and Mrs. St. Clair McKelway, Rev. Bishop Courtenay, Mrs. Andrew S. Draper, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Pruyn, Regent and Mrs. Daniel Beach, Regent and Mrs. Pliny T. Sexton, Regent and Mrs. Albert W. C. Smith, Regent Chester S. Lord, Regent and Mrs. William Nottingham, Regent and Mrs. Eugene A. Philip, Regent Lucius N. Littauer, Regent and Mrs. Francis M. Anderson, Regent and Mrs. Adelbert Root.

The final exercises to-morrow afternoon will include remarks by Chancellor Whitelaw Reid, the presentation of the building to the Regents by Gov. Dix on behalf of the State, the acceptance of the building by the Regents, the dedication address by the Hon. Charles F. Johnson, Commissioner of Education, and brief congratulatory addresses by Gov. Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., and former Gov. Charles F. Smith.

Adj.-Gen. Verbeck will be the grand marshal of the ceremonial procession, which will include the Governor and his staff, former Governors, the United States Commissioner of Education, the members of the State Board of Regents and the delegates from the various institutions of learning, over 200 in all.

The New York State Library, it was pointed out to-day, serves the whole State. It lends books, either singly or in collections called travelling libraries, in every nook and corner of the State.

The New York Public Library, or any State library, serves only a city. The State library is not a circulating library in the city of Albany as the New York Public Library is in the boroughs of Manhattan, the Bronx and Richmond.

Only a small part of the work of the State library is done in the offices and reading rooms. Day after day an enormous amount of correspondence from every corner of the State, and from all parts of the country, indeed, testifies to the actual use of the library by those for whom it is designed, the citizens of the whole State.

It is idle to compare the book collections of the State Library and the New York Public Library. That in the metropolis already is one of the great libraries of the world. This at the capital began over again without a book after the fire less than two years ago.

It was, however, already 350,000 volumes, and in its new quarters, with its splendid facilities for work, those in charge say a great library will arise and a great library work will again develop.

The staff of the State Library numbers at present 113 persons. There was spent during the past calendar year $159,000 for books. An expenditure of five times this sum has been authorized by the Legislature.

The Education Extension Division has to do with the welfare of nearly 600 registered free public libraries throughout the State, and each year it distributes $35,000 in subsidies conditioned upon approved book purchases.

Finally, the State Library also includes reference collections, administered through the expert staff which is found in the five reading rooms in the new building.

Manager Hart of the hotel admitted to-day that Miss Hoffmann reported to him last night that her apartments had been robbed. Husband Max, however, informed the newspapers of the theft early this morning. Mr. Hoffmann said that when he and Mrs. Hoffmann entered the suite at 1130 P. M., they saw that everything in the rooms had been overhauled. Several trunks had been opened and their contents thrown about. ALL DAY CELEBRATION
Sixty-one College Presidents Attend the Inauguration Ceremonies.

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 16.—The inauguration of President Alexander Meiklejohn of Amherst college took place to-day. The whole day was devoted to the celebration which started with the academic procession this morning and ended with the president's reception this evening. Many noted educational men prominent in public life were present.

The academic procession led all the delegates to College Hall, where, after the invocation by President Emeritus George Harris, the insignia of office were presented to President Meiklejohn by George Plimpton, president of the board of trustees.

The new president made a speech of acceptance and congratulatory speeches were made by Arthur P. Hugg, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, on behalf of the alumni; by Dean George C. Oide, on behalf of the faculty; and by Randolph S. Merrill, on behalf of the undergraduates.

President Meiklejohn then delivered his inaugural address. He chose for his subject "The Ideals of the Teacher and the Problems of the Student as They Present Themselves to the Teacher."

He said the mission of the teacher is to lead his pupils into the intellectual life. President Meiklejohn endeavored to show that this is the only way to the highest culture, the results of which generally prove to be of great practical value.

He definitely committed himself to the duty of establishing a classical course at Amherst and of enforcing the new minor and minor elective courses. He also advocated and better methods in the presentation of studies.

One hundred and two educational institutions were represented at to-day's celebration. Sixty-one college presidents were present. These included President Lowell of Harvard, President Aldrich of Yale, Smith of the University of Pennsylvania, Hibben of Princeton, Fausch of Brown, Deane of Dartmouth, Garfield of Williams, Hyde of Bowdoin, Richmond of Union, Shanklin of Kenyon, and many others.
